ECO-ENZYME & FUWA3E

WHAT IS ECO-ENZYME?

Garbage enzyme, known as eco-enzyme, results from the-fermentation of organic waste (such as fruit), vegetable pulp, sugar (brown sugar, brown sugar, or cane sugar), and water. It is dark brown in colour and has a strong sweet and sour fermented aroma. This enzyme was developed by Dr Rosukon (Thailand). She has been actively involved in enzyme research for more than 30 years, and she encourages people to make eco- enzyme at home.

Eco-Enzyme is claimed to release ozone gas (O₃) which can reduce carbon dioxide (CO₂) in the atmosphere. Thus, the liquid will reduce the greenhouse effect and global warming. Eco-enzymes also convert ammonia to nitrate (NO₃), a natural hormone and nutrient for plants. In addition, the liquid can convert CO₂ into carbonate (CO₃), which is beneficial for marine plants and marine life.

Another advantage of eco-enzyme is that it helps natural cycles, such as facilitating plant growth (as fertilizer), treating soil, and cleaning polluted water.
