AGRO DEPARTMENT

The core of Vietnamese cuisine lies in the balance of five flavours, which correspond to the five elements and five human organs: spicy (metal) to the large intestine, sour (wood) to the gallbladder, bitter (fire) to the small intestine, salty (water) to the urinary bladder, and sweet (earth) to the stomach

Vietnamese spices enhance the taste of dishes, as well as magnify, enhancing and making them even tastier. The abundant use of these ingredients makes Vietnamese culinary art one of a kind.

IQF FRUITS & VEGITABLES

IQF frozen products are frozen using the individual rapid freezing (IQF) method. This method does not allow large ice crystals to form in the plant cells, and since each part is individually frozen, the particles do not stick together and the final product is not frozen into a solid mass.

IQF technology creates smaller ice crystals that don't spoil the product as much as traditional freezing methods, resulting in better and fresher quality of fruits and vegetables as it does not create large ice crystals that can damage cell walls.

Individual freezing also means there's no need to defrost the entire product before use, so you can get what you need. This makes IQF a very convenient technology for food preparation and home cooks alike.

RICE

PRODUCTION

GIFT FROM GOD

Rice production in Vietnam in the Mekong and Red River deltas is important to the food supply in the country and national economy. Vietnam is one of the world's richest agricultural regions and is the second-largest exporter worldwide and the world's seventh-largest consumer of rice. The Mekong Delta is the heart of the rice-producing region of the country where water, boats, houses and markets coexist to produce a generous harvest of rice. Vietnam's land area of 33 million ha has three ecosystems that dictate rice culture.
