BUSINESS AREAS

I. Dry Pho Vermicelli

- As manufacturers and distributors, we always place ourselves in the position of the consumer. For us, quality is not merely determined through inspection but is evaluated based on the trust of customers when using our products.
- Dry noodles - vermicelli - pho offer numerous health benefits for individuals. With their nutritional components, dry noodles contribute to reducing cholesterol in the body, preventing and combating cancer, supplying supplementary carbohydrates for energy into the body to facilitate normal brain function, controlling blood pressure, and reducing the risk of cardiovascular diseases.

II. Green Tea - Black Tea

- Green tea, also known as leaf tea, is a type of tea that does not undergo oxidation like black tea. Green tea comes in various forms: long-pointed leaves, flat leaves, curled leaves, and ball-shaped leaves. When brewed, green tea leaves produce a bright green or yellow-green color, with a fresh and slightly bitter taste.
- Black tea, also known as red tea or hong cha, is a type of tea whose leaves undergo complete oxidation, resulting in a black color. The brewed tea has a brown color, a strong aroma, and a bolder flavor compared to other types of tea. While green tea retains its flavor for about a year, black tea can maintain its aroma for many years.

SIMILARITIES BETWEEN GREEN TEA AND BLACK TEA

BLACK TEA OP (Orange Pekoe)

Black tea, also known as Hong Tea, is a type of tea that has more antioxidant properties than oolong tea, yellow tea, white tea and green tea. Therefore, black tea has the strongest flavor among all types of tea. Orange Pekoe tea is taken from shrimp, 1 leaf tip, black curly appearance, relatively even size, with snow. The quality is of the highest quality, the water color is bright red-brown, viscous, with golden edges; characteristic aroma; Bold, mild, with aftertaste.

BLACK TEA BOP (Broken Orange Pekoe)

Black tea, also known as Hong Tea, is a type of tea that has more antioxidant properties than oolong tea, yellow tea, white tea and green tea. Therefore, black tea has the strongest flavor among all types of tea. Broken Orange Pekoe black tea is the broken part of Orange Pekoe tea (including shrimp and leaf tip 1), has a lot of snow, and rich flavor.

BLACK TEA PEKOE (Pekoe)

Black tea, also known as Hong Tea, is a type of tea that has more antioxidant properties than oolong tea, yellow tea, white tea and green tea. Therefore, black tea has the strongest flavor among all types of tea. Pekoe tea is made from petiole 1, first half of leaf 2, and relatively young buds. Pekoe tea buds have a relatively curly appearance, are short in size but larger than the natural black Orange Pekoe; watercolor similar to Orange Pekoe; Strong taste but less aftertaste and aroma than Orange Pekoe.

BLACK TEA OPA (Orange Pekoe A)

Our Orange Pekoe A black tea is a premium tea consisting of leaves that are slightly larger than other Orange Pekoe varieties such as OP and OP1. This type of tea has the largest leaf shape and size and a unique flavor compared to other small leaf teas.

BLACK TEA TH (TH)

Black tea, also known as Hong Tea, is a type of tea that has more antioxidant properties than oolong tea, yellow tea, white tea and green tea. Therefore, black tea has the strongest flavor among all types of tea. TH tea has dark red water, rich flavor, with a subtle herbal scent. Effective in strengthening the immune system, improving metabolism.
