WELCOME TO OUR COMPANY

The story that belongs to us

When I was young, I loved following my grandmother to the early morning market. Right at the village gate, rows of white rice noodles drying on bamboo racks always caught my eye. "That's Hoai Duc dried rice noodles," my grandmother would say proudly. "Our village has made them for fifty of years." (Hoai Duc is the name of a former district of Hanoi)

The old craft village in Hoai Duc, on the outskirts of Hanoi, has long been known for its traditional noodle-making secrets. Every family, every generation, has guarded the craft with patience and quiet dedication. From selecting fragrant rice to grinding it smooth, from spreading the batter evenly to cutting soft, clean strands the work requires care at every step.

People here say they're not just making noodles, they're telling the story of the land. Each strand carries the breath of the fields, the labor of steady hands, and the memory of countless harvest seasons. Modern machines may replace stone grinders, but the soul of the craft purity, precision, and love for local rice remains unchanged.

Today, even in newer, more modern workshops, I still see glimpses of my childhood: the gentle aroma of fresh noodles and the proud eyes of the craftsmen. Hoai Duc continues to keep its simple charm and, most importantly, its unbroken tradition.

Farmers and artisans deserve the chance to build better lives. Gavico with 15 years of experience was founded with that purpose embracing modern machinery, standardized processes, and international production standards to bring the authentic flavors of our craft villages to the world, while helping local farmers improve their livelihoods."
